TOPIC: The Middle East

This Learning Community will introduce you to the Islamic world from the perspectives of two disciplines: history and the study of art and architecture. We will cover the history of the Islamic world from the beginning of Islam to the Mongol conquests (7th-15th centuries), and read a variety of primary sources written during this time. Students will also study the art and architecture of ancient Mesopotamia and the Islamic world to understand their aesthetic concerns and how they visually express cultural and religious beliefs. We will also discuss stereotypes of the Middle East through works of art and how artists from this region have addressed them.

TOPIC: We the People: Understanding the linkages between the body Politic and Public Safety Outcomes

This learning community links PSC 125: Public Policy with PHI 110: In the PSC section, students will learn about the process by which public (government) policies are made: how/why some problems make it onto the agenda, how policies are formulated, implemented, evaluated and changed, and how public input impact policy outcomes. In PHI 110, students will explore the role of citizenship (do we have a right or obligation to obey unjust laws?) and the role of class and gender in the political arena. The LC will include a focus on public policy issues as they relate to economic class and the LGBTQ community. These two sections will come together when students combine critical reasoning with public policy knowledge to critically analyze the way public utilizes online information and resources to think about, understand, and influence the policy world.

TOPIC: Literature and the Law

Works of literature and media representations often present complex depictions of power, the law, and legal issues. While the accuracy of these depictions can be questionable, some aspects of the law are surreal as anything found in fiction. In this course we'll look at dystopian fiction, legal history, television (such as episodes of Breaking Bad) and case studies to examine important questions about surveillance, freedom of speech, individual liberty, and government power.

TOPIC: Equality & the Sports Industry

This learning community explores the concept of economic and social equity within the business of professional and amateur sport by studying the roles of franchisee owners and administrators, college athletic directors, Olympic sport personnel, recreation managers and the athletes themselves.

TOPIC: Making Sense of Society

This learning community focuses on the systematic study of social behavior and human groups as well as the processes of social change through quantitative data and measurements. Without the mathematical basis provided by statistics, data and measurements in the field of sociology would be rendered meaningless or, even worse, capable of distorted and misleading interpretation. Students will explore the foundations or sociology as a social science while concurrently exploring the mathematical science of statistics in a more applied manner than the usual theory focused course. This course is not permitted for BA MATH majors.

TOPIC: World History Through a Critical Eye

This learning community links HST 106: Introduction to World History II: The World since 1500 with PHI 113: Critical Thinking with Google. In the HST section, students will learn about the processes that have shaped the modern world and how to examine written and visual sources to understand the past. The PHI section will address the question, "How can we use Google to form true beliefs about the world?" This will involve identifying how cognitive biases influence our thinking, seeking out logical fallacies online and critiquing the bogus conspiracy theories that swamp our feeds. These two sections will come together when students combine critical reasoning with historical knowledge to critically analyze the way people online think about different historical events

TOPIC: Culture and Crisis

This learning community explores the relationship between society, theater and film. "Culture and Crisis" will look at some of the fundamental categories that structure ancient and modern society (i.e. purity, honor gender, morality). It will look at the way these values are reflected in sections of the Bible as well as select novels and films. "Theatre, Madness and Power" explores the ways in which such categories determine who we are and provide us with boundaries we overstep at our peril. The course explores, in particular, the ways in which theatre and film have played alternately sacred, populist, controversial, and conservative roles in examining, challenging or determining our ideas of sanity, purity, sexuality and morality. The course will complement "Culture and Crisis" by exploring plays, films, and readings that reflect recurring crises in ancient and modern society.
