Our Planet Topped 400

We reached a milestone last month and not one to celebrate. Our atmospheric carbon dioxide (CO₂) levels reached 400 parts per million. CO₂ levels have been steadily rising (<http://climate.nasa.gov/news/916>) throughout the industrialized era and we know that the burning of fossil fuels (gasoline, natural gas, coal, heating oil, propane) release CO₂ into the atmosphere. Increases in this greenhouse gas have consequences: environmental change, human health issues, economic ramifications and social implications. Although we can't pin the blame for a particular tornado or hurricane on CO₂ levels, numerous models predict increases in erratic weather and more powerful storms. We can all feel helpless when presented with global problems. Making changes at home is important, but we need to advocate for positive steps on a larger scale. It is easy to say "they should do something about it". We are part of "they" and we should expect our elected officials to represent our views through policy and action. Few politicians are mind readers, so make sure that your elected representatives know your views on all of the issues that you consider important.

Buffalo News Great Lakes Series

The Buffalo News has recently published a front-page special report series on the Great Lakes. Beginning Sunday, May 26, Buffalo News reporter T. J. Pignataro has addressed a separate topic over five days covering sewage and the beaches, invasive species, lake levels, the Dead Zone and botulism, trash and the future. You can access the articles at their website at www.buffalonews.com.

Be Green Organic Yards NY

Want a beautiful yard using organic practices without conventional pesticides and synthetic fertilizers, but need help to create and maintain it? Businesses that participate in DEC's Be Green Organic Yards NY program can take care of your lawn, plants, and trees organically. When you hire a Be Green business, only products and materials that meet DEC's conditions for organic management should be used in your yard. Be Green businesses sign an agreement with DEC for the right to use the Be Green service mark (logo). In return, businesses agree that, when they provide Be Green services, they will avoid the synthetic pesticides and other materials prohibited by the organic conditions as they are defined in the agreement. The businesses also take an introductory Be Green training course that explains the conditions of the Be Green agreement and introduces the basic concepts of organic lawn care. Homeowners and commercial customers looking for organic yard care can visit our web site for a list of Be Green Businesses. Questions about the program? Email us at BeGreen@gw.dec.state.ny.us

Text Campaign- Grow 716

Have you ever seen something happening in your neighborhood that you wish you could stop, but you didn't know how? Through the support of the Community Foundation for Greater Buffalo and the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation, Grow 716, a community journalism project, has been created so that you can report what is going on in your neighborhood. It's illegal for a truck to idle for longer than five minutes. Don't put up with the fumes! Text TRUCKS to 877877 to report them. Have you stepped outside only to be greeted by a foul odor? Report it! Text STINK to 877877. Do you see dark, dangerous looking smoke? Let us know by texting SMOKE to 877877. Your report will go to the Clean Air Coalition of Western New York who will bring these problems to the people in power and use the data to make change in our community. *Messaging and Data Rates May Apply. Text STOP at any point to quit. Be on the lookout for more information about the Grow 716 community journalism project. If you are a member of the Western New York Environmental Alliance and want to learn about how your organization can utilize this texting project, contact Kristen Kaszubowski at kristenk@growwny.org.

Beware of Hogweed

Giant hogweed, an invasive plant that can cause painful burns, will be flowering in a few weeks. Please use the NYSDEC Giant Hogweed Hotline for all inquiries: ghogweed@gw.dec.state.ny.us or 845-256-3111. The hotline is a place for people to report new sites, get help identifying suspect giant hogweed plants, ask questions about the plant and how to control it, and connect with the statewide control project. From mid-June through mid-July DEC gets hundreds of inquiries and it may take them a week or two to respond at that time. For help in identifying the plant, visit <http://www.dec.ny.gov/animals/39809.html>.

Citizen Science Takes on Big Business

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has posted a new video to its national YouTube channel highlighting the role citizen science has played in raising awareness about pollution from the Tonawanda Coke Corporation facility in Tonawanda, New York. The video is part of a larger project to highlight the work of "citizen scientists" across the country and connect communities with tools they can use to start citizen science projects. The video explains how concerned members of the Tonawanda community used citizen science to focus attention on the pollution in their area. Their efforts spurred the EPA and the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation to investigate the problem and take action against the Tonawanda Coke corporation, resulting in a dramatic decrease in harmful pollutants being emitted. To view the video and to get more information about citizen science, visit <http://www.epa.gov/region02/citizenscience>.

Earth Day Carol Video

Novel Packaging Ideas Create More Sustainable Solutions

Package designer Aaron Mickelson decided to focus his master's thesis on reducing the 70 million tons of packaging waste reaching landfills each year. His "Disappearing Package" project targeted several consumer products whose packaging he deemed fit for a redesign – Tide laundry PODs, OXO POP containers, Twinings tea, GLAD trash bags and NIVEA soap – and found methods for not only reducing the amount of packaging for each product, but actually eliminating packaging waste altogether. For NIVEA Soap, Mickelson came up with an alternative that looks similar to current packaging, but has one very different quality: it dissolves in the shower. The box would be made from non-toxic, water-soluble paper, so once it enters the water, the packaging would disappear. To prevent consumers from accidentally opening the package out of habit, the ends of the box would have a unique shape and a reminder that the box should be washed away.

A roll of GLAD trash bags is currently sold in a heavyweight paperboard box, which amounts to 3,334 pounds of packaging waste per truckload. Mickelson chose to get rid of these boxes in his design and instead turned one of the trash bags into the product's packaging. The roll's outermost bag would serve as a label with product and company information on it, as well as instructions that that bag should be used last. Consumers would pull bags one by one from the middle of the roll, eventually leaving the bag with the printed information for last. This way, consumers will remember which brand of bags they need to put on their shopping lists.

New York's Watchable Wildlife

Whether it's the spectacle of a soaring eagle or a glimpse of a river otter, here you'll find what you need to plan a great wildlife viewing experience in New York State. Habitat Restoration Project at Joseph Davis State Park

A landmark habitat restoration project continues at Joseph Davis State Park in Lewiston, New York. Supported by over $350,000 in grant funds from Federal programs and national funders, this work will provide high-quality habitat for resident and neo-tropical migratory birds. Buffalo Audubon is directing the work to enhance and protect approximately 130 acres of critical shrubland and wetland bird habitat along the lower Niagara River Corridor and restore sensitive bird habitat that further improve the ability of the Corridor to attract resident and migratory bird populations.

The first phase of the project involves the removal of invasive plant species including Honeysuckle, Common Reed (Phragmites), and Buckthorn, along with the selective removal of younger trees to promote the development of valuable shrub habitat. Invasive species, such as Honeysuckle, provide low-quality habitat for birds. As fields turn into forests, important grassland and shrub habitat is lost. Subsequent work will plant native shrubs and grasses in order to provide high-quality food, nest sites, and habitat for birds.

Initial mapping of plant communities, invasive species, and the development of the habitat restoration plan was supported by a generous $195,550 grant from the Niagara River Greenway Ecological Standing Committee to the Buffalo Audubon Society. Subsequent funding for invasive species removal and habitat restoration comes from two sources: $197,585 from the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation Sustain our Great Lakes Stewardship Grants program and $160,031 from the United States Department of the Interior Fish and Wildlife Service Joint Venture Habitat Restoration and Protection program – part of the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative.

WNY Regional Sustainability Plan

Cornell Small Farms Program: the Guide to Urban Farming in New York State

The Guide to Urban Farming in New York State is a 105-page resource guide available as a PDF from the Cornell Small Farms Program website at <http://smallfarms.cornell.edu/resources/>. The guide covers many topics, including tips for advocating for urban agriculture, engaging communities, dealing with contaminated soils, intensive growing techniques, urban composting, site security, urban livestock, direct marketing options, accepting food stamps, grant and financial opportunities, and many more.

Sustainable Dining with a Crunch

The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization released a report (info) on the benefits of insects in the diet and the number of edible bugs that are already consumed around the globe. Many insects are packed with protein, fiber, good fats, and vital minerals—as much or more than many other food sources. Commercially raising and harvesting insects is more environmentally friendly than livestock and in some cases, we are devouring a species that would destroy our crops. They can be cooked in lots of dishes- just use creativity and spices.

Citizen Science

Project BudBurst- Spring is just around the corner and every plant tells a story. Whether you have an afternoon, a few weeks, a season, or a whole year, you can make an important contribution to a better understanding of changing climates. Project BudBurst is a network of people across the United States who monitor plants as the seasons change and submit ecological data based on the timing of leafing, flowering, and fruiting of plants. If you would like to make a meaningful contribution to understanding environmental change, join our rapidly growing community today! <http://budburst.org/>

House Sparrow Project-What do nest monitors and researchers have in common with bluebirds and other native cavity-nesters? We all deal with house sparrows, an introduced species. As spring arrives and birds begin nesting, the House Sparrow Project invites you to collaborate in citizen-science research on this non-native species. Whether you have a handful of nest boxes or a large trail, actively or passively manage sparrows, there are only three requirements for participation: curiosity, nest boxes, and a promise to keep good records. Everyone in the U.S. and Canada is invited to participate. Visit the House Sparrow Project to get more information and sign up.

Hummingbird Citizen Science Project-As flowers bloom earlier because of warming temperatures, the impact on hummingbirds which rely on nectar could be severe. The National Audubon Society has launched a new citizen science project to document hummingbird sightings across the country, using a free mobile app that identifies bird species as well as the plants that feed them. Find out more at www.audubon.org/citizenscience.

Tips for the Environment:

- 1. Protect your skin safely- Skin cancer is the most common cancer in the US, so get informed and play it safe. The FDA has issued new labeling rules for sunscreen products. Sunscreen products that meet the criteria for being called “Broad Spectrum” and have a Sunscreen Protection Factor (SPF) of 15 or higher may state that they reduce the risk of skin cancer and early skin aging when used as directed with other sun protection measures. The Environmental Working Group provides a guide to safe sunscreens at <http://www.ewg.org/2013sunscreen/>. You can also stay informed on the UV index with the EPA's free UV Index app at www.epa.gov/enviro/mobile/.
- 2. Reuse and recycle your Tips for the Environment-we are probably all using CFL bulbs, recycling regularly and engaging in lots of earth-friendly behaviors. So let's reuse and recycle-you can check the list of tips from the first Enviro-News in January 2006 (check for any missed at econews). If you have tips to share, please send them to me to include.
