

Religious Studies

Degree Offered: Bachelor of Arts

Minors Offered:

- Philosophy, philosophy and religious studies, and religion

Daemen's Department of Philosophy and Religious Studies does not advocate any particular religious ideas or beliefs, but encourages an appreciation of the rich diversity of religious perspectives.

Career Options:

Nonprofit director. Interfaith advisor. Substance-abuse counselor. Seminary administrator. Government or library researcher.

Why Religious Studies @ Daemen?

- In addition to courses that explore Christianity, Buddhism, Islam, Judaism, Hinduism, and other religious traditions, Daemen's religious studies program offers you the innovative classes that investigate compelling topics such as the Holocaust and health care in today's technological society.
- You'll also find religious studies courses in medical ethics valuable if you're majoring in areas such as physician assistant studies, nursing, and pre-med.
- Students are assisted in thinking creatively and critically about human existence, meaning, and the nature of reality with the goal of acquiring an increased capacity for logical analysis, appreciation of values, deepened self-knowledge, and an understanding and enjoyment of diverse ideas and systems.

Post-Graduation Possibilities:

Students may go on to pursue graduate degrees or attend divinity schools.

John Millar, Religious Studies

"Dr. Kelley has helped facilitate in depth and revealing research and drives me to learn more about my major even when I'm not in school."